Founded in 1915 as the Cartographic Group, the first division of National Geographic, National Geographic Maps has been responsible for illustrating the world around us through the art and science of mapmaking. Today, National Geographic Maps continues this mission by creating the world's best wall maps, recreation maps, atlases, and globes which inspire people to care about and explore their world.

I expected more from National Geographic. This map is designed for the tourist who has a day or two to spend in Munich. I needed a map with more detail and depth. I found a better one in the Hallway International City Map of Munich. It is richer, more detailed, and easier to use.

I love maps and have stacks of them. In fact, I always get at least two for any country and city outside the United States that I will be visiting. Although I had 2 guidebooks for Munich, the maps just didn't give me the perspective that I was looking for: the "overall picture" as well as sufficient detail to feel comfortable that I knew what to expect and how long I could expect it to take to get to certain destinations (either walking or riding). The National Geographic maps have now become my "go to" whenever I am starting to research somewhere. I just couldn't be happier.

I gave this guide away because it focussed too much on a very small area. But the person I gave it to thought it was perfect!

Great map but doesn't go far enough into immediately outskirts of the city.

Would buy again
