Julie Moir Messervy's vision for composing landscape of beauty and meaning is furthering the evolution of landscape design and changing the way people create and enjoy their outdoor surroundings. With over three decades of experience, eight books (including Home Outside and Outside the Not So Big House with Sarah Susanka), and numerous high-profile lectures, Messervy is an innovative leader in landscape and garden design theory and practice. Her landscape architecture and design firm, JMMDS, is located in Saxtons River, Vermont.

I really like the author's approach to landscape design. Her concepts, sketches, and beautiful photography clearly convey her principles while challenging the reader to create an outdoor living space uniquely theirs.

Beautiful and inspiring pictures, great principles, it gave me what I needed for my project. For people new to the details involved in plants, there's not a lot of information in this book, but that's not what it set out to achieve. It's a great 'one of many' you should have in your collection if directing your landscaping, or wanting to be part of the decision-making process.

Covers the aspects of landscaping with enough visuals and printed details to allow you to adapt the methods and techniques in the book to your landscaping project. There's even a very solid technique to guide you from 'that thing you like to do to the yard one day,' to a finished plan, including the detailed steps, and materials cost.

The photos are nice, but I couldn't really find anything in the book that I could use toward establishing my own particular garden. I guess it just depends on what your specific needs are.

Much cheaper than buying in the box home improvement stores. Had some good ideas

I purchased this book as a gift for my brother who recently bought a new home. The color photos, ideas, descriptions and quality of the book are just wonderful. He has spent many happy hours perusing the book and putting the ideas to work.

Great ideas. Beautiful and inspiring pictures, great principles, it gave me what I needed for my project.
