Naval Aviation In The Korean War: Aircraft, Ships, And Men

Synopsis

The first part of this book covers the role of US aircraft carriers and aircraft in stopping the North Korean initial push to the south and also their role in the famous Inchon Landing and Pusan Perimeter Break out. The last part of the first chapter deals with naval operations during the Marine's Chosin Reservoir march to the sea in December 1950. The book goes on to describe the stabilization of the front lines after the Chinese had entered the war during 1951. At this time, the emphasis for naval air operations was centered on interdiction behind the lines. The focus was on trying to stop road and rail traffic from resupplying the communist troops and allowing them to build up to a major offensive. It also includes the entry of the F2H Banshee into carrier operations which gave the USA four major types of aircraft with which to wage the war. During 1952 most carrier air groups spend their time off the coast of North Korea while hitting targets up along the Yalu River, putting them well within the range of the MiG-15s. Navy F9F Panthers were used as top cover while the Corsairs and Skyraiders went after major targets such as the dam complexes up river and marshaling yards north of Pyongyang. During 1953, naval air operations were stepped up in an effort to get the communists back to the truce talks. The number of MiG-15s had grown to a figure many times that of the UN for overhead protection. The deep missions were more dangerous than ever and the Chinese brought in state of the art antiaircraft automatic weapons. The number of sorties flown by the US Naval aircraft increased over the previous year's record numbers. The war ended on July 27, 1953.

Excellent review of aircraft and naval operations during Korean War!

Excellent book for the naval aviation enthusiast. Great color photo's. Many I haven't seen before. Enjoyed the stories of the many different pilots of corsairs, early carrier jets and skyraiders.

Excellent account.

Great read and the photos of the various aircraft are extremely interesting. The book pages and pictures are top grade materials.

Great history.

Naval Aviation In the Korean War is a well written, well documented account of the Korean air war from 1950 until it ended in 1953. It contains numerous stories by the Naval Aviators who fought in this war. I especially appreciated the statistics of the types of airplanes flown by each squadron, and the detailed losses sustained for each type of airplane. Highly recommended for history buffs.

as advertised
